Market overview

+ Financial markets generally declined in the second quarter amid record inflation, rising interest rates and increasing likelihood of a US recession. Driven by higher food and energy prices, the Consumer Price Index (CPI) rose by 8.6% for the year ending in May, the largest 12-month increase in 40 years. Oil prices (WTI) peaked near $122 per barrel in early June, then declined in response to a slower growth outlook, finishing the quarter near $110. Gasoline prices also rose; the national average price reached a record high above $5.00 per gallon in early June. To tame inflation, the US Federal Reserve raised the benchmark federal funds rate twice during the quarter, by 0.50% in May and by 0.75% in June, which was the largest increase in nearly 30 years. The S&P 500 Index returned -16.10% in the second quarter and -19.96% for the first half, its worst 6-month period since 1962.

Positioning and outlook

+ We use an intrinsic value approach to select investments for the fund. The portfolio is not constructed based on a short-term macroeconomic view. Instead, positioning is driven by bottom-up stock selection based on intrinsic value. We seek to create wealth by maintaining a long-term investment horizon and investing in companies that we believe are significantly undervalued on an absolute basis.

+ Given our focus on intrinsic value and a long-term investment horizon, the fund was positioned with more economically sensitive stocks than its peers at quarter end.

+ At quarter end, the difference between the market price and the estimated intrinsic value of the fund's holdings was very attractive, according to our estimation. Although there is no assurance that market value will ever reflect our estimate of the fund's intrinsic value, we believe the gap between price and estimated intrinsic value indicates above-average, long-term capital appreciation potential.

+ We are excited about the current portfolio and believe the fund's investments may continue to position it for solid absolute and relative performance over the long term.

+ Going forward, we will work hard to protect and grow the fund's estimated intrinsic value. We thank you for your investment and for sharing our long-term perspective.

Performance highlights

+ The fund's Class A shares at net asset value (NAV) performed in line with the Russell Midcap Value Index. (Please see the investment results table on page 2 for fund and index performance.) All fund sectors declined for the quarter, with utilities and consumer staples detracting the least from absolute return and industrials and energy detracting the most. Having no exposure to real estate and communication services helped relative return, as did an overweight in energy. Stock selection in financials and an underweight in utilities detracted from relative return.

Contributors to performance

+ Cigna, a provider of pharmacy benefit management and health insurance services, rose after management reported strong first quarter results and raised its 2022 outlook.

+ Marathon Petroleum shares performed well after the company reported good financial results for the first quarter of 2022. We sold the fund's position during the quarter based on price appreciation and to fund more attractive investment opportunities.

+ Shares of integrated petroleum refiner HF Sinclair also rose during the quarter after the company reported strong financial results led by performance in its refining and lubricants segments.

Detractors from performance

+ Vertiv is a global provider of critical digital infrastructure and continuity solutions. Shares were negatively affected by concerns about ongoing inflation and the impact it may have on the company's near-term operating margins.

+ Univar Solutions manufactures and sells a variety of specialty chemicals and chemical-based products. The company's shares fell toward quarter end along with the materials sector in general.

+ Shares of medical care facilities company Universal Health Services fell after management reported disappointing earnings as higher wages negatively affected first quarter revenues.

About risk

Derivatives may be more volatile and less liquid than traditional investments and are subject to market, interest rate, credit, leverage, counterparty and management risks. An investment in a derivative could lose more than the cash amount invested.

The risks of investing in securities of foreign issuers can include fluctuations in foreign currencies, political and economic instability, and foreign taxation issues.

Leverage created from borrowing or certain types of transactions or instruments may impair the fund's liquidity, cause it to liquidate positions at an unfavorable time or lose more than it invested, increase volatility or otherwise not achieve its intended objective.

Investments in real estate related instruments may be affected by economic, legal, or environmental factors that affect property values, rents or occupancies of real estate. Real estate companies, including REITs or similar structures, tend to be small- and mid-cap companies, and their shares may be more volatile and less liquid.

Stocks of small and mid-sized companies tend to be more vulnerable to adverse developments, may be more volatile, and may be illiquid or restricted as to resale.

A value style of investing is subject to the risk that the valuations never improve or that the returns will trail other styles of investing or the overall stock markets.

The fund is subject to certain other risks. Please see the current prospectus for more information regarding the risks associated with an investment in the fund.
