Market overview

+ Emerging markets are positioned differently during this global downturn compared to downturns in the past. Balance sheets at the government and corporate levels are far healthier than in previous crises. Emerging market central banks are ahead of the curve in dealing with inflation, having begun their tightening cycles earlier than their developed market peers. And, in a world with elevated energy prices, resource rich countries (Brazil and Chile) are benefiting, while net importers of commodities (China and India) are securing long-term supply contracts at discounted prices funded in their own currencies. Yet, emerging market valuations are at steeper discounts to the developed world than they have been during the last decade. Emerging markets are evolving from being a beta play on global growth to a source of alpha generation in a rapidly changing and uncertain world. The net result is a spectacular opportunity to own undervalued, high quality stocks with potential for long-term structural growth.

Positioning and outlook

- + The largest position we initiated during the quarter was Coupang, an end-to-end ecommerce and logistics company based in South Korea (0.55% of total net assets).
- + The largest position exited during this quarter was Remgen a Chinese biopharmaceutical company (0.00% of total net assets). We also trimmed the fund's position in Keymed Bioscience, a China-based biologics company.
- + During this period of crisis and uncertainty, we remain focused on understanding the macroeconomic pressures that are idiosyncratic to emerging markets. However, we are unwavering in our approach as bottom-up investors who focus on the long term and avoid tactical decisions. We will continue to seek high quality companies that have durable long-term growth potential supported by strong competitive positions, balance sheets, cash flows, etc. that will allow them to thrive in the post-Coronavirus world.

Performance highlights

- + Invesco Emerging Markets Innovators Fund Class A shares at net asset value (NAV) outperformed its benchmark index for the quarter. (Please see the investment results table on page 2 for fund and index performance.)

Contributors to performance

- + Stock selection and an overweight allocation to the health care sector was the largest contributor to relative performance. Stock selection and an underweight allocation to the materials sector benefited relative performance, as did an underweight allocation to the information technology sector.
- + Geographically, stock selection and an underweight in South Korean equities was the largest contributor to relative performance. An overweight allocation in Hong Kong added to relative return, as did an underweight allocation to Taiwan.
- + The largest individual contributor to absolute performance was H World, formerly Huazhu, a pioneer in China's hotel industry, primarily using a franchise model. H World has seen improvement in RevPar (revenue per available room) and has benefited from strong performance from its overseas assets.

Detractors from performance

- + Stock selection in the consumer discretionary, real estate and consumer staples sectors detracted from relative performance.
- + Geographically, stock selection and an overweight allocation to Brazilian equities was the largest detractor from relative performance. An underweight in Chilean equities also negatively affected relative return, as did an overweight in Mexico.
- + Americanas, a Brazilian omni-channel retailer, was the largest detractor from relative performance. Although we believe there should be room for continued growth in Brazil's fractured retail landscape, near-term headwinds, including a rise in the Selic rate (Brazil's federal funds rate), have affected the company.

About risk

Derivatives may be more volatile and less liquid than traditional investments and are subject to market, interest rate, credit, leverage, counterparty and management risks. An investment in a derivative could lose more than the cash amount invested.

Stock and other equity securities values fluctuate in response to activities specific to the company as well as general market, economic and political conditions.

ESG considerations may vary across investments and issuers, and not every ESG factor may be identified or evaluated for investment. The Fund will not be solely based on ESG considerations; therefore, issuers may not be considered ESG-focused companies. ESG factors may affect the Fund's exposure to certain companies or industries and may not work as intended. The Fund may underperform other funds that do not assess ESG factors or that use a different methodology to identify and/or incorporate ESG factors. ESG is not a uniformly defined characteristic and as a result, information used by the Fund to evaluate such factors may not be readily available, complete or accurate, and may vary across providers and issuers. There is no guarantee that ESG considerations will enhance Fund performance.

The risks of investing in securities of foreign issuers, including emerging markets, can include fluctuations in foreign currencies, political and economic instability, and foreign taxation issues.

Stocks of small and mid-sized companies tend to be more vulnerable to adverse developments, may be more volatile, and may be illiquid or restricted as to resale.

In late February 2022, Russian military forces invaded Ukraine, significantly amplifying already existing geopolitical tensions among Russia, Ukraine, Europe, NATO and the West. Russia's invasion, the responses of countries and political bodies to Russia's actions, and the potential for wider conflict may increase financial market volatility and could have severe adverse effects on regional and global economic markets, including the markets for certain securities and commodities such as oil and natural gas. Following Russia's actions, various countries, including the U.S., Canada, the United Kingdom, Germany, and France, as well as the European Union, issued broad-ranging economic sanctions against Russia. While diplomatic efforts have been ongoing, the conflict between Russia and Ukraine is currently unpredictable and has the potential to result in broadened military actions. The duration of ongoing hostilities and corresponding sanctions and related events cannot be predicted and may result in a negative impact on performance and the value of Funds investments, particularly as it relates to Russia exposure.
